

A. Korolyov
Odessa National Polytechnic University

Use of the injector in the ECCS system to improve its functional reliability

The design decision has been proposed to improve the emergency core cooling system (ECCS) operational reliability. The calculations have been carried out demonstrating the efficiency of using a water-watered injector to heat water supplied to the reactor and increase its pressure.